Accountability: Evaluation for Occupational Programs Milo P. Johnson 1973 In response to demands from politicians, taxpayers, parents and others for the implementation of systems to provide educational accountability, this text describes a positive, educationally sound program geared to improving the efficiency and effectiveness of teaching. It details a variety of methods for measuring educational output and revising strategies for improvement. Applicable to individual teachers as well as entire school systems, this text provides a sound approach for improved, accountable teaching results in occupational or vocational education programs.
