Agent-Oriented Information Systems II Paolo Bresciani 2005-05-10 Information systems have become the backbone of all kinds of organizations - day. In almost every sector - manufacturing, education, health care, government and businesses large and small - information systems are relied upon for - eryday work, communication, information gathering and decision-making. Yet, the in?exibilities in current technologies and methods have also resulted in poor performance, incompatibilities and obstacles to change. As many organizations are reinventing themselves to meet the challenges of global competition and e-commerce, there is increasing pressure to develop and deploy new technologies that are ?exible, robust and responsive to rapid and unexpected change. Agent concepts hold great promise for responding to the new realities of - formation systems. They o?er higher-level abstractions and mechanisms which address issues such as knowledge representation and reasoning, communication, coordination, cooperation among heterogeneous and autonomous parties, p- ception, commitments, goals, beliefs, intentions, etc., all of which need conc- tual modelling. On the one hand, the concrete implementation of these concepts can lead to advanced functionalities, e.g., in inference-based query answering, transaction control, adaptive work ?ows, brokering and integration of disparate information sources, and automated communication processes. On the other hand, their rich representational capabilities allow for more faithful and effective treatments of complex organizational processes, leading to more effective requirements analysis and architectural/detailed design.

IFIP TC3 - the International Federation for Information Processing's Technical Committee 3 - is concerned with Education and Information Technology. The educators and computer professionals in TC3 are involved with both perspectives on the subject, i.e. the role of information technology in supporting education, and the educational needs of an informatics society. This anthology, a selection of papers from the last twenty-five years, is arranged in ten sections. Each section covers a particular aspect of Informatics and Education, aiming to be: - characteristic of contributions in that domain - illustrative of the changes in technology and perception - indicative of the various cultural and economic concerns - representative of all TC3 publications over the period.
