

Chapter 5 Academic Computing Services

Raunds Furnells Andy Boddington 2014-06-15 On the south side of the river Nene in east Northamptonshire, a settlement was established at Raunds in the sixth century AD. Some 300 years later the settlements was served by a small field church. Total and careful excavation ahead of twentieth-century building development found in both the church and adjoining cemetery exceptional features the study of which has contributed to the archaeology of the churches, of the liturgy, and the burial practices of the Anglo-Saxon period. The seeming simplicity of the church's beginnings was deceptive. Before the first church building had been standing long, it proved too small: a chancel was added. Liturgical features were found which did not often survive elsewhere (a pot, used as a sacrarium, buried in front of the free-standing altar, and behind the altar, a clergy bench). The boundaries of a graveyard were established around the church. Many of the earliest burials were preserved, undisturbed by later inhumation. The congregation buried its dead in ordered zones, the earliest dominated by a plot, perhaps a 'founder's grave', distinguished by an elaborately carved stone grave cover, possibly also be a standing cross. In the last years of the graveyard's use, burials of young children took place in an 'eaves-drip' zone flanking the church walls. Much information was retrieved about the population who for two centuries used the church, about their physical health, and about their very varied burial practices. Although a larger church was later built on the site, it was soon abandoned, and subsequently adapted for secular use as part of a 'manorial complex'. The site of the graveyard was forgotten. In context, the church and cemetery represent on phase in the development of the Raunds landscape between prehistory and the present day. This excavation provided the stimulus for detailed archaeological survey of the Raunds area, resulting in the establishment of the Raunds Area Project, managed jointly by the Northamptonshire Archaeology Unit and English Heritage. This volume is the Project's first report.

Cases and Materials on Advanced Torts Dan B. Dobbs 2006 This advanced torts casebook covers all the major business and dignitary torts, including defamation, privacy invasions, disparagement, bad-faith breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, conversion of economic values, interference with contract and economic opportunity, unfair competition, and others. It examines essential policy issues involving free speech, free competition, and the question of whether contract trumps tort in commercial transactions. It also includes material on developing law, such as Internet issues, strategic lawsuits against public participation (SLAPP) statutes and analogous free-speech issues, and the economic loss rule(s).
