Computer Aided Formulation Alan Harrison Bohl 1990 Formulation chemists and engineers, along with their research managers, have long known the difficult nature of formulation problems. This book is a manual to help them to identify key issues, design efficient experiments, and develop math models to resolve conflicting objectives. Specific solved examples, co-authored by chemists, show how well these methods work on industrial-strength problems and document the power and efficiency of computer aided formulation. This book is the first one to combine techniques of operations researching decision science, and statistics to solve formulation problems. Readers will appreciate its chapters on experimental design, which are easy to read and enjoyable.

Building and Solving Mathematical Programming Models in Engineering and Science Enrique Castillo 2011-10-24

Fundamental concepts of mathematical modeling Modeling is one of the most effective, commonly used tools in engineering and the applied sciences. In this book, the authors deal with mathematical programming models both linear and nonlinear and across a wide range of practical applications. Whereas other books concentrate on standard methods of analysis, the authors focus on the power of modeling methods for solving practical problems-clearly showing the connection between physical and mathematical realities-while also describing and exploring the main concepts and tools at work. This highly computational coverage includes: * Discussion and implementation of the GAMS programming system * Unique coverage of compatibility * Illustrative examples that showcase the connection between model and reality * Practical problems covering a wide range of scientific disciplines, as well as hundreds of examples and end-of-chapter exercises * Real-world applications to probability and statistics, electrical engineering, transportation systems, and more Building and Solving Mathematical Programming Models in Engineering and Science is practically suited for use as a professional reference for mathematicians, engineers, and applied or industrial scientists, while also tutorial and illustrative enough for advanced students in mathematics or engineering.

Institute 1996 Basic transformations in social environmental concerns, in the structure of management problems, and in the tools to approach these problems have rendered conventional monolithic modelling approaches difficult, costly, and of little relevance to resolving today's emerging problems in forest management. This publication presents proceedings of a workshop addressing hierarchical planning in forest management, involving the use of integrated systems of small models that can be linked with each other. Topics of workshop papers include hierarchical planning in forest resource management and in the forest products industry; tactical level harvest scheduling; policy analysis models; resource allocation mechanism design; applications of hierarchical forest planning; analysis of old-growth designations; incorporating wildlife objectives into forest planning; decision support systems; and data and decision aggregation processes.
